ABOUT THE TARIFF.

A Characteristic Letter From Our Young Friend Spalding.

LOUISVILLE, April 23d, 1894. Thomas A. Davis, Esq.—Dear Sir: * * * justify themselves in raising rates in What are you going to do in regard to a Congressman? Take my late advice and in Kentucky last year. Well, in the other place, send the six coupons and ten send one who can take care of himself. Can't we get that Tariff question settled, that we may have the good old times return? We are nearly all wearing Cleveland Badges in this city, especially the poor men. I have one about eight inches square. I wear it on the seat of my trousers. It don't matter what the color is, so it shows we are for Cleveland. I must say I know but little about the Tariff question. We generally want it to suit ourselves without regard to others. In 1844 we used to sing a good old tune, "We're Going to Vote for Henry Clay." It ran as follows:

We're going to vote for Henry Clay, will you go, will you go? The Tariff act of '42 for purposes of revenue, will you go, will you go?
Make up your mind to do your part, will you go, will you go?
And now for victory make a start, will you go, will you go?

Well, we did do our part, but James K. Polk of Tennessee got there first. I know but little more about the question than I did at that time, and there are hundreds of thousands howling about it that know no more. There are but few left in Maysville who sang that good old Whig song fifty years ago. I can at present think of but one, your Uncle Will. There may be more. Yours truly, D. Spalding.

The insurance companies attempt to justify themselves in raising rates in in Kentucky last year. Well, in the above list their own figures show that $158,000 net of this loss occurred in the single city of Covington! In a list of seventeen cities only four-Covington, Cynthians, Harrodsburg and Winchester -show excess of losses over receipts All others show enormous profits.

Is there any more justice in making Maysville pay for losses in other places at a small cost. than there would be in making one individual customer pay the loss incurred by a merchant through a bad credit?

Commenting upon Lawyer Stoll's fiery letter to Judge Wilson The New York World says: "It is to be hoped that Judge Wilson will have the good sense not to answer Mr. Stoll's letter or to take any notice of it whatever. It requires no answer, and is beneath Judge Wilson's notice. The man who should take notice of it is Colonel W. C. P. Breckinridge. The sooner he muzzles his "counsel" and retires them to the remotest recesses of the backwoods of Kentucky the sooner he and they will relieve the strain that has been put upon the patience of the people."
